Public Procurement

Keep it short and simple!

CEMR position and proposals for amendments to the Commission’s proposal for a new Directive on public procurement / COM (2011) 896 final

June 2012
CEMR Key Messages

CEMR calls on the European Parliament & Council to significantly reform the Commission’s proposals so that they deliver a ‘light’ regime

- Local and regional government as public procurers fully endorse the need for open competition when tendering many types of public contract and fully support the Treaty principles of equality, transparency, and non-discrimination when it comes to public procurement;

- However, consistently applying the complex rules of the European Directives without receiving any offer from providers in another member state means a waste of resources and cost: the complex EU regime is not proportionate to the results being achieved;

- An increase of the threshold for goods and services would help to reduce time and cost burdens on both sides: the tenderers and the bidders;

- Transparency, non-discrimination and equal treatment in public procurement procedures below the thresholds should be ensured by the Member States via national rules.

CEMR believes that it is necessary to return to the basic objectives and principles of the public procurement concept and find pragmatic, manageable solutions, along the following lines:

- Focus on the Treaty principles (equality, transparency, non-discrimination) and ways to strengthen their application, in particular by using new technologies;

- A proportionate and well-balanced legal framework that provides for the basic principles, leaving sufficient flexibility for both the public authority and the bidder;

- Reduction of legal and administrative burdens, simplifying and aligning procedures, again for both the public authority and the bidder;

- Allow local and regional authorities to determine their own purchasing priorities;

- Increase awareness and incentives to look for innovative solutions.
Part 1: CEMR position on the Commission’s Proposal

1. Public Procurement is a core issue for local and regional authorities. A major part of public spending is done at local and regional level and thus contributes in a significant way to the economy in Europe’s cities, municipalities and regions.

2. This is particularly important in times where public investments can help to keep people in their jobs, stimulate smart growth in sustainable projects and avoid further economic and social degradation.

3. CEMR as the European umbrella organisation of 60 national associations representing local and regional government from 40 countries has been actively engaged in the debate on the development of the European public procurement rules over the last decade.

Comments on the Commission’s proposal

4. CEMR wishes to underline that the original objective of the public procurement regime is to ensure value for money.

5. Local and regional authorities report that European public procurement procedures are very costly and time consuming and still do not materialise in the expected result: cross-border purchasing. The financial and administrative efforts invested in the required procedures are disproportionate to the number of contracts concluded with tenderers from another Member State.¹

6. Some of the 246 pages of provisions proposed by the Commission have more the character of guidelines for implementation and should not be part of a legislative text. Such elements should be provided in a separate, accompanying communication or handbook, which allows modifications over time, without legislative amendment, to keep up with the fast pace of CJEU procurement case law. In this way the legislative text itself could be significantly simplified.

7. CEMR strongly objects to such detailed provisions at European level as proposed and stresses, with reference to the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality that such details, including governance and enforcement, should be left to the appropriate authorities in each Member State.

8. Like the European Parliament in its resolution on ‘modernisation of public procurement’, CEMR believes that a new Directive needs to propose a significant simplification and consolidation of the rules.

9. However, the proposed text does the opposite. It goes way beyond what we consider to be proportionate: it proposes to create new burdens for legal services, new advertising requirements for social services (article 75) and a requirement to introduce new procedures nationally (article 76), new monitoring bodies at national level (article 84), additional explanations as to the contract value chosen (article 44), and heavy reporting and notification obligations (e.g. articles 85 & 86), even directly to the European Commission (e.g. article 32 (6)).

10. We therefore call on the European Parliament and the Member States to take a bold approach and screen the draft Directive in order to eliminate all provisions containing overly detailed rules. In times when public authorities, including the European Commission services, are reducing staff, it is not appropriate to introduce ever-heavier administrative burdens.

¹ This is confirmed by the Commission’s own evaluation which shows that only 1.6% of contracts are awarded to companies in other Member States.
11. We would encourage the European Parliament & Council to significantly reform the Commission's proposals so that they instead deliver a 'light' regime.

12. We consider the WTO Government Procurement Agreement (GPA) with its 24 articles on 33 pages to be an excellent model for such a light regime. Since both regimes (EU and WTO) must be generally consistent, we strongly encourage the European legislator to align the proposed Directive to the lighter approach of the GPA.

13. CEMR strongly advocates for an increased threshold in order to get the balance right in terms of reflecting cross-border interest: doubling the thresholds for goods and services to €400,000 would be a positive first step.

14. Furthermore, and again in line with the European Parliament resolution from 2011, we call for fewer and more flexible procedures in line with the GPA, especially when the Commission argues thresholds cannot be raised. The need for a greater element of negotiation in procedures is particularly pressing.

15. Concerning public-public cooperation, the proposal assumes too strict an interpretation of the CJEU case law. The wording of the European Parliament's resolution perfectly reflects the jurisprudence of the CJEU and should be used for the text in the Directive. The resolution underlines the fact that transferring tasks between public sector organisations is a matter for the Member States' internal administrative organisation and not subject to procurement rules.

16. We would also prefer to have a short reference to the above exclusion in article 1 of the Directive in addition to the detail of the exemption being specified in article 11.

17. Concerning social and other person-specific services (articles 74 – 76) CEMR does not see the necessity of introducing new burdensome provisions. Like the European Parliament we are in favour of keeping a lighter regime for this category of services, especially for social and legal services a regime is needed which recognises their specific character.

18. Also ‘lighter’ rules for local or regional contracting authorities are welcome; their contracted services often have limited cross-border relevance. It also has to be clarified that emergency (medical) services also fall under this category.

19. Public procurement rules are not suitable when it comes to the provision of specific services such as legal advice, social, health or educational services to individuals.

20. Furthermore, CEMR is concerned that under article 10 (d) activities to raise money or capital are no longer excluded from the Directive. This will have a major impact on the ability of local and regional authorities to borrow money because public procurement procedures will make public borrowing a much more lengthy, complicated and expensive process.

21. Last but not least, on the question of service concessions, where the European Commission has proposed a separate directive, CEMR is opposed to a rigid legal framework. If the European Commission continues to pursue its intention to legislate service concessions, CEMR wishes to stress that these rules should not go beyond a basic advertising or prior notification requirement.

In the second part of this paper, CEMR presents proposals for amendments to the Commission’s directive, which translate our position into changes to the legislative text. The structure into clusters follows the order of the negotiations in the Council working group and the European Parliament leading Committee on Internal Market and Consumer Protection (IMCO). Where possible, reference was made to the amendments proposed by the rapporteur of the Committee, Mr Tarabella.

Part 2: Proposals for amendments

Cluster 1: Greater choice of procedures

CEMR position: More flexibility for tendering authorities and bidders

CEMR believes that the new directive needs to propose a significant simplification and consolidation of the European public procurement rules. Tendering authorities spend a lot of time and resources on applying the very complex European procurement rules without receiving any offer from providers in another Member State.

This means a waste of resources, lengthy processes, and huge costs that local and regional government can hardly bear in times of economic difficulties.

CEMR is in favour of a more flexible use of the competitive dialogue procedure, and the introduction of a greater freedom to negotiate. We support in general the deadlines as proposed by the European Commission and not the extended deadlines, as proposed by the rapporteur, Mr Tarabella.

Therefore, we propose the following:

- Support amendments 44, 45 and 46 of the rapporteur;
- No support of amendments 47, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55 of the rapporteur;
- Additional amendments to
  - article 24, ‘choice of procedures’;
  - article 27, ‘competitive procedure with negotiation’ and
  - article 30, ‘use of negotiated procedure without prior publication’;

procedure with negotiation, the competitive dialogue and the innovation partnership procedures.

Justification

The European Commission has based its proposal on the Government Procurement Agreement (GPA) of the WTO. As a result, according to the Commission, it is not possible to raise the thresholds. However, the flexible procedures in the GPA are only partially adopted by the Commission, and even allow the Member States the possibility to deny the use of them to contracting authorities.

In our opinion it is not up to the Member States to determine whether the flexible procedures should be converted into national legislation. Contracting authorities should themselves be able to decide which procedure, amongst all the procedures, is the appropriate one to use in each procurement process.

This is particularly true for the competitive procedure with negotiation, which is very important in practice. Public procurement would be significantly more difficult without this procedure. This procedure is suitable for achieving very good value for money. In addition, it reduces the administrative burden for the individual municipal offices. For that reason, the contracting authorities should remain entitled to make a choice here instead of giving member states the right to make this decision for all cases in advance.

In tenders for consulting services (e.g. comprehensive IT software), there is for example sometimes not a clear perception of how a certain task is to be performed. By drawing on the bidder’s know-how, however, a solution can then be developed in a step-by-step approach within the framework of negotiations.

Amendment to Article 27 paragraph 1 sub-paragraph 2: Competitive procedure with negotiation

In the contract notice or in the invitation to confirm interest contracting authorities shall describe the procurement and the minimum requirements to be met and specify the award criteria so as to enable economic operators to identify the nature and scope of the procurement and decide whether to request to participate in the negotiations. In the technical specifications, contracting authorities shall specify which parts thereof define the minimum requirements.

Amendment to Article 27 paragraph 1 sub-paragraph 2: Competitive procedure with negotiation

In the contract notice or in the invitation to confirm interest contracting authorities shall describe the procurement and the minimum requirements to be met and specify the award criteria so as to enable economic operators to identify the nature and scope of the procurement and decide whether to request to participate in the negotiations.

GPA text see: http://www.wto.org/english/docs_e/legal_e/gpr94_01_e.htm
Justification

The newly introduced Article 27 paragraph 1 sub-paragraph, sentence 2 foresees regulations for the competitive procedure with negotiation which are stricter than the ones currently in place. This will not only lead to a deterioration in practical procurement, but it also contradicts this revision's main objective to contribute to a simplification and flexibilisation of procedures. Thus, it should be deleted without substitution.

In practice, such a regulation would lead to increased legal uncertainty, as is currently the case in terms of whether or not variants are accepted. Despite the European Court of Justice’s judgment of 16 October 2003 (C-421/01, "Traunfellner GmbH") defining the contracting authority’s obligation to always set out minimum specifications if taking variants into consideration, it is still not entirely clear how specific these minimum specifications have to be and if they need to be set out for all or only for some (and if so, for which) parts of the work to be performed.

The contracting authority should not be obliged to set out minimum specifications before even launching the procedure. On the one hand, such minimum specifications are not legitimate if the technical specifications of a work are not subject to the tenderer’s interpretation. A competitive procedure with negotiation often follows a non-successful open or restricted procedure; as a result, a negotiated procedure without prior publication may be required due to time constraints (Art. 30, par. 2 a). Thus, the procedure is not primarily chosen based on the subject-matter of the contract. And on the other hand, minimum specifications may prevent innovative solutions.

Amendment to Article 30 paragraph 2 a: Use of negotiated procedure without prior publication

| (a) where no tenders or no suitable tenders or no requests to participate have been submitted in response to an open procedure or a restricted procedure, provided that the initial conditions of the contract are not substantially altered and that a report is sent to the Commission or the national oversight body designated according to Article 84 where they so request. | (a) where no tenders or no suitable tenders or no requests to participate have been submitted in response to an open procedure or a restricted procedure, provided that the initial conditions of the contract are not substantially altered. |

Justification

In combination with Art. 84, Art. 30, par. 2 a, 2nd half of the sentence leads to an unnecessary bureaucratic burden, especially due to the fact that there is to be only one responsible national body and due to the unclear formulation of a duty to report. The passage “and that a report is sent to the Commission or the national oversight body designated according to Article 84 where they so request’ should therefore be deleted without substitution.
Amendment to Article 30 paragraph 2 c (i)

| (c) where the works, supplies or services can be supplied only by a particular economic operator for any of the following reasons: | (c) where the works, supplies or services can be supplied only by a particular economic operator for any of the following reasons: |
| (i) the absence of competition for technical reasons; | (i) the absence of competition for technical or legal reasons; |

Justification

Art. 30, par. 2 c (i) should be completed as follows: “the absence of competition for technical or legal reasons”. That would also include cases where the contracting authority needs a building to be constructed in a specific location and the owner will only agree to sell the premises if he/she is also awarded the construction contract.
Cluster 2: Strategic use of public procurement

CEMR position: Public procurement should not be overly used as an instrument to pursue policy objectives

Local authorities are concerned about EU efforts to use procurement to address policy goals such as environmental and social issues via, for example, their inclusion as award criteria in public contracts. The choice of whether, in addition, to opt for green, or social, or innovation aspects within public contracts should be decided by the local or regional authority itself. Any EU requirements to include green, social, or other policy goals in public contracts must remain entirely voluntary.

Concerning social and other person-specific services (articles 74 – 76) CEMR does not see the necessity of introducing new burdensome provisions. We are in favour of keeping a lighter regime for this category of services, especially for social and legal services a regime is needed which recognises their specific character. Also ‘lighter’ rules for local or regional contracting authorities are welcome; their contracted services often have limited cross-border relevance. It also has to be clarified that emergency (medical) services also fall under this category. Furthermore, public procurement rules are not suitable when it comes to the provision of specific services such as legal advice, social, health or educational services to individuals.

Therefore, we propose the following:

- No support for amendments 86, 90, 114, 121 of the rapporteur
- Support amendments 92, 93, 120, 142, 143 of the rapporteur
- Additional amendments for
  - Article 4 (d), threshold amounts
  - Article 17, reserved contracts
  - Article 54 (2), general principles;
  - Article 55 (3), exclusion grounds;
  - Article 66 (1) (b), contract award criteria
  - Article 67 (3), life-cycle costing
  - Article 75, publication of notices
  - Article 76, principle of awarding contracts

Amendment to Article 4 (d)

| EUR 500 000 for public contracts for social and other specific services listed in Annex XVI. | EUR 1 000 000 for public contracts for social and other specific services listed in Annex XVI. |

Justification

The threshold for social services and other specific services should be aligned with the thresholds of the utilities directive (article 12 c of the Commission’s proposal), which is EUR 1 000 000. This appears even more appropriate since social services are usually very locally provided and have little relevance for the internal market.
Amendment to Article 17, Reserved contracts

Member States may reserve the right to participate in public procurement procedures to sheltered workshops and economic operators whose main aim is the social and professional integration of disabled and disadvantaged workers or provide for such contracts to be performed in the context of sheltered employment programmes, provided that more than 30% of the employees of those workshops, economic operators or programmes are disabled or disadvantaged workers. The call for competition shall make reference to this provision.

Member States may reserve the right to participate in public procurement procedures to sheltered workshops and economic operators whose main aim is the social and professional integration of disabled and disadvantaged workers or provide for such contracts to be performed in the context of sheltered employment programmes, provided that more than 30% of the employees of those workshops, economic operators or programmes are disabled or disadvantaged workers. ‘Disadvantaged persons’ includes amongst others: the unemployed; people experiencing particular difficulty in achieving integration; members of vulnerable groups and members of disadvantaged minorities. The call for competition shall make reference to this provision.

Justification

The ability to reserve contracts to enterprises employing ‘disadvantaged’ persons is new. The term ‘disadvantaged persons’ therefore needs to be specified in the directive, as it is much wider than the concept of ‘handicapped’ persons referred to in the current directive. As the term ‘disadvantaged persons’ is only used in Article 17, this is the clearest place to explain the term.

Amendment to Article 54 (2)

Contracts shall be awarded on the basis of the criteria laid down in Articles 66 to 69, provided that the following cumulative conditions are fulfilled:

1. Contracts shall be awarded on the basis of the criteria laid down in Articles 66 to 69, provided that the following cumulative conditions are fulfilled:

   a. the tender complies with the requirements, conditions and criteria set out in the contract notice or the invitation to confirm interest and in the procurement documents, taking into account Article 43;

   b. the tender comes from a tenderer that is not excluded in accordance with Articles 21 and 55 and that meets the selection criteria set out by the contracting authority in accordance with Article 56 and, where appropriate, the non-discriminatory rules and criteria referred to in Article 64.

   a. the tender complies with the requirements, conditions and criteria set out in the contract notice or the invitation to confirm interest and in the procurement documents, taking into account Article 43;

   b. the tender comes from a tenderer that is not excluded in accordance with Articles 21 and 55 and that meets the selection criteria set out by the contracting authority in accordance with Article 56 and, where appropriate, the non-discriminatory rules and criteria referred to in Article 64.
2. Contracting authorities may decide not to award a contract to the tenderer submitting the best tender where they have established that the tender does not comply, at least in an equivalent manner, with obligations established by Union legislation in the field of social and labour law or environmental law or of the international social and environmental law provisions listed in Annex XI.

Justification

Art. 54 paragraph 2 refers to the compliance with EU legislation. This formulation is very wide and in this way unclear. Furthermore it is already possible under the existing directive to exclude tenderers who do not act legally. Therefore, this provision is unnecessary. This kind of regulation is superfluous because it is self-evident that both, tenderer and contracting authority, have to respect EU legislation.

the performance of any substantive requirement under a prior contract or contracts of a similar nature with the same contracting authority.

In order to apply the ground for exclusion referred to in point (d) of the first subparagraph, contracting authorities shall provide a method for the assessment of contractual performance that is based on objective and measurable criteria and applied in a systematic, consistent and transparent way. Any performance assessment shall be communicated to the contractor in question, which shall be given the opportunity to object to the findings and to obtain judicial protection.

Justification

The scope of Art. 55. 3 (a) is very general and wide. Besides it is pointless, because the violation of those obligations in the field of social and labour law or environmental law are already recognised as significant violations. Therefore, this provision is unnecessary. This kind of regulation is superfluous because it is self-evident that both, tenderer and contracting authority, have to respect EU legislation.

The explanation of the meaning of Art. 55. 3 (last subparagraph) is not comprehensive and is inappropriate regarding the conditions for claims. So far it only means that claims have to be noted in written form we can agree. But a new kind of remedy or legal protection would be inappropriate because the award and the execution of the contract would be mixed up. Furthermore it would create more bureaucracy for the contracting authorities, a new field of legal uncertainty and room for legal actions.

Furthermore this formulation is too detailed for a legal text. It is up to Member States to decide the standard of evidence required.

Amendment to Article 66 paragraph 3, Contract award criteria

(Amendment 120 of the rapporteur)

| 3. Member States may provide that the award of certain types of contracts shall be based on the most economically advantageous tender as referred to in point (a) of paragraph 1 and in paragraph 2. | deleted |

Justification

Art. 66, par. 3 should be deleted without substitution. The objective of this modernization is to provide contracting authorities and bidders with a maximum of flexibility. This flexibility is limited if Members States are put in a position to decide that certain types of contracts will have to be awarded to the most economically advantageous tender instead of making the decision based on the lowest price. This regulation only allows for over-all solutions and the lowest price should always be an option.

Small companies will have more difficulties to compete for instance on environmental or social criteria, but may well be much more competitive on cost. If the award cannot be based on the lowest cost, the opportunities for small companies to participate in the competition will be reduced significantly: they will be frozen out of the market.

Amendment to Article 66 paragraph 4, sentence 1 and 2

4. Award criteria shall not confer an unrestricted freedom of choice on the contracting authority. They shall ensure the possibility of effective competition and shall be accompanied by requirements that allow the information provided by the tenderers to be effectively verified. Contracting authorities shall verify effectively, on the basis of the information and proof provided by the tenderers, whether the tenders meet the award criteria.

Amendment to Article 67, paragraph 3, Life-cycle costing

Whenever a common methodology for the calculation of life-cycle costs is adopted as part of a legislative act of the Union, including by delegated acts pursuant to sector specific legislation, it shall be applied where life-cycle costing is included in the award criteria referred to in Article 66(1).

A list of such legislative and delegated acts is set out in Annex XV. The Commission shall be empowered to adopt delegated acts in accordance with Article 89 concerning the update of this list, when on the basis of the adoption of new legislation, repeal or modification of such legislation, such amendments prove necessary.

Delete
Local and regional government supports the Europe 2020 objectives and recognises the value of a sustainable, socially responsible and innovative procurement policy. In line with our wishes, the proposal contains no obligations.

In this respect, the lifecycle costs occupy an important role. We support this objective, but have noted that the development of the calculation method is still experiencing teething problems. An obligation to use the EU method, given the current circumstances, would be too ambitious. We are also not in favour of the authority for determining the methods being delegated to the Commission.

Justification

New ex-ante advertising requirements for social and other specific services are unwelcome as they introduce new burdens which are not appropriate to this category of service. Transparency should be ensured, as currently, through ex-post publication of a contract award notice.
Amendment to Article 76, Principles of awarding contracts

1. Member States shall put in place appropriate procedures for the award of contracts subject to this Chapter, ensuring full compliance with the principles of transparency and equal treatment of economic operators and allowing contracting authorities to take into account the specificities of the services in question.

2. Member States shall ensure that contracting authorities may take into account the need to ensure quality, continuity, accessibility, availability and comprehensiveness of the services, the specific needs of different categories of users, the involvement and empowerment of users and innovation. Member States may also provide that the choice of the service provider shall not be made solely on the basis of the price for the provision of the service.

Justification

Social services are locally provided and do by their nature not have any relevance for the internal market. Consequently they are in practice not offered transitionally. New burdensome provisions for social services on European or national level creates therefore unnecessary administrative burden for tendering authorities. Particularly in the field of social services in terms of simplification and flexibility new provisions have to be avoided. The ex-post publication requirement of the current directive is sufficient to meet the EU principles of transparency, equal treatment and proportionality.
Cluster 5: SME access

CEMR position: The public procurement rules should be more simple. This would make it easier for SMEs to submit offers.

The general aim should be to make the rules as simple as possible so that contracting authorities of all sizes can work with them. Where procurement rules remain complex, contracting authorities remain with ‘in house’ delivery models. However, if the European legislator really wants to make public procurement more SME friendly, it could consider the inclusion of ‘reservations’ to allow a proportion of contracts to be specifically directed towards SMEs. This is permitted by the GPA and used widely in the USA and several WTO countries. Such ‘reservations’ would also be of value as regards nonprofit organisations. Furthermore, placing new limits on sub-contracting limits market opportunities for smaller businesses.

Therefore, CEMR proposes the following:

- No support for amendments 81 and 137 of the rapporteur;
- Additional amendments to
  - article 44, division of contracts into lots
  - article 71, subcontracting

4. Contracting authorities may require that all contractors coordinate their activities under the direction of the economic operator to which has been awarded a lot involving the coordination of the entire project or its relevant parts.

Justification

The value of a contract is determined by the very nature and scale of the goods, works or services procured. Why a contract is valued above €500,000 will be self-evident according the subject matter. It is therefore an unnecessary administrative burden, and an exaggerated duty, for contracting authorities to have to explain and give reasons in every larger contract why the contract has a value above €500,000 and has not been disaggregated.
Amendment to Article 71, Subcontracting

1. In the procurement documents, the contracting authority may ask or may be required by a Member State to ask the tenderer to indicate in its tender any share of the contract it may intend to subcontract to third parties and any proposed subcontractors.

2. Member States may provide that at the request of the subcontractor and where the nature of the contract so allows, the contracting authority shall transfer due payments directly to the subcontractor for services, supplies or works provided to the main contractor. In such case, Member States shall put in place appropriate mechanisms permitting the main contractor to object to undue payments. The arrangements concerning that mode of payment shall be set out in the procurement documents.

3. Paragraphs 1 and 2 shall be without prejudice to the question of the principal economic operator’s liability.

1. In the contract documents, the contracting authority may ask or may be required by a Member State to ask the tenderer to indicate in his tender any share of the contract he may intend to subcontract to third parties and any proposed subcontractors.

2. Member States may provide that at the request of the subcontractor and where the nature of the contract so allows, the contracting authority shall transfer due payments directly to the subcontractor for services, supplies or works provided to the main contractor. In such case, Member States shall put in place appropriate mechanisms permitting the main contractor to object to undue payments. The arrangements concerning that mode of payment shall be set out in the procurement documents.

3. The indication shall be without prejudice to the question of the principal economic operator’s liability.

Justification

The relationship between a contractor and a sub-contractor is a fundamental element of contract law, falling within the sphere of competition law, which should not be altered in the current Directive.

The possibility to allow direct payment of subcontractors by contracting authorities creates additional confusion and complexities around sub-contracting. If a contractor is performing a task against remuneration for a contracting authority then it becomes a contractor, not a sub-contractor.

Furthermore, the proposal will see unwelcome approaches by sub-contractors directly to contracting authorities to seek payment. This interferes with the right of contracting authorities to withhold payment from the contractor for valid contract performance reasons, even those for which the sub-contractor is not responsible.

The amendment introduces the text of the current Directive 2004/18/EC with a modification.
Cluster 8: Sound procedures

CEMR position: Keep the rules simple and flexible for both the contracting authorities and the bidders

CEMR strongly objects detailed provisions at European level as proposed by the Commission and stresses, with reference to the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality that such details should be left to the appropriate authorities in each Member State. In times when public authorities are reducing staff, it is not appropriate to introduce ever-heavier administrative burdens on the tendering authorities and the bidders.

CEMR therefore proposes the following:

- Amendments to
  - article 18 (1), confidentiality
  - article 69, abnormally low tenders

Amendment to article 18 paragraph 1, Confidentiality

1. Unless otherwise provided in this Directive or in the national law concerning access to information, and without prejudice to the obligations relating to the advertising of awarded contracts and to the information to candidates and tenderers set out in Articles 48 and 53 of this Directive, the contracting authority shall not disclose information forwarded to it by economic operators which they have designated as confidential, including, but not limited to, technical or trade secrets and the confidential aspects of tenders.

Justification

Within the framework of the General Rules, art. 18 should make clear that this rule does not apply if the contracting authority is entitled or obliged to pass on the relevant information in accordance with other regulations, e.g. in case of a review procedure, when dealing with the legal supervisory authority or in due process of law.

Amendment to article 69, abnormally low tenders

1. Contracting authorities shall require economic operators to explain the price or costs charged, where all of the following conditions are fulfilled:

   (a) the price or cost charged is more than 50% lower than the average price or costs of the remaining tenders

   (b) the price or cost charged is more than 20% lower than the price or costs of the second lowest tender;

1. If, for a given contract, tenders appear to be abnormally low in relation to the goods, works or services, the contracting authority shall, before it may reject those tenders, request in writing details of the constituent elements of the tender which it considers relevant. Those details may relate in particular to:

   (a) the economics of the construction
2. Where tenders appear to be abnormally low for other reasons, contracting authorities may also request such explanations.

3. The explanations referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 may in particular relate to:
   (a) the economics of the construction method, the manufacturing process or the services provided;
   (b) the technical solutions chosen and/or any exceptionally favourable conditions available to the tenderer for the execution of the work, for the supply of the goods or services;
   (c) the originality of the work, supplies or services proposed by the tenderer;
   (d) compliance, at least in an equivalent manner, with obligations established by Union legislation in the field of social and labour law or environmental law or of the international social and environmental law provisions listed in Annex XI or, where not applicable, with other provisions ensuring an equivalent level of protection;
   (e) the possibility of the tenderer obtaining State aid.

4. The contracting authority shall verify the information provided by consulting the tenderer. It may only reject the tender where the evidence does not justify the low level of price or costs charged, taking into account the elements referred to in paragraph 3. Contracting authorities shall reject the tender, where they have established that the tender is abnormally low because it does not comply with obligations established by Union legislation in the field of social and labour law or environmental law or by the international social and environmental law provisions listed in Annex XI.

5. Where a contracting authority establishes that a tender is abnormally low because the tenderer has obtained State aid, the tender may be rejected on that ground alone only after consultation with the tenderer where the latter is unable to prove, within a sufficient time limit fixed by the contracting authority, that the aid in question was compatible with the internal market within the meaning of Article 107 of the Treaty. Where the contracting authority rejects a tender in those circumstances, it shall inform the Commission thereof.

6. Upon request, Member States shall make available to other Member States, in accordance with Article 88, any information relating to the evidence and documents produced in relation to details listed in paragraph 3.

Justification

The amendment aims to replace the text from the proposal of the Commission with the text of the current article on abnormally low tenders. The new proposal introduces administrative burdens for companies and contracting authorities by narrowly describing abnormally low prices on one hand (eliminating reasons that could be justifiable like an innovative or cost-efficient solution) and obliging contracting authorities to always reject these tenders. Furthermore it would limit the freedom of the contracting authority in the tendering process more than the current Directive.
Cluster 9: Governance

CEMR position: No need to introduce new administrative oversight structures

CEMR believes that the Commission’s proposal for new monitoring bodies at national level and heavy reporting and notification obligations are disproportionate and not in line with the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality.

CEMR therefore proposes the following:

- Deletion of
  - article 83, enforcement;
  - article 84, public oversight;
  - article 85, individual reports on procedures for the award of contracts;
  - article 86, national reporting and lists of contracting authorities;
  - article 87, assistance to contracting authorities and businesses.

- Introduction of a new article on 'content of reports' (taken from Article 43 of current directive).

- Amendment to article 88, administrative cooperation

Justification

Article 83: It is superfluous in a Directive to have an article stating that the Directive should be applied correctly.

Articles 84, 85, 86, 87: The requirements to create new national ‘oversight bodies’ and send contracts to them clearly infringe subsidiarity and duplicate the role of existing national courts, government ministries, and procurement advisory bodies. These articles cause unnecessary administrative burdens.

Article 84 should be deleted for various reasons. It is up to the Member States to organise their internal administration. Member States can decide to create an oversight body (article 84) without European regulation. Article 84 is contrary to the principle of subsidiarity.

We think that enforcement and compliance with the rules is very important. We do not believe that big top down structures are very helpful for sound enforcement and compliance throughout Europe at every level. It is better that the bodies responsible for carrying out democratic control are equipped to fully undertake this task. Reports from financial and legal auditors on procurement practices should be available to municipal and regional councils. Bottom up control will better promote compliance than the appointment of one or more separate oversight bodies.

In addition, businesses should be able to monitor compliance by appealing to the courts.

Article 85 should be deleted. Instead a new Article 83 should be inserted mirroring the current Article 43 from Directive 2004/18. This allows the Commission to request reports on an exceptional basis from contracting authorities, rather than requiring contracting authorities to systematically send every large contract to the Commission which is another bureaucratic burden, and runs contrary to the simplification aims of the Directive.

Article 88 should be maintained but without the references to the new ‘oversight bodies’.

The contracting authorities shall take appropriate steps to document the progress of award procedures conducted by electronic means.

Amendment of article 88, administrative cooperation

1. Member States shall provide mutual assistance to each other, and shall put in place measures for effective cooperation with one another, in order to ensure exchange of information on issues referred to in Articles 40, 41, 42, 55, 57, 59, 60, 61, 63 and 69. They shall ensure the confidentiality of the information which they exchange.

3. Member States shall publish and regularly update the list of liaison points. The oversight body shall be in charge of the coordination of such liaison points.

4. The exchange of information shall take place via the Internal Market Information system established pursuant to Regulation (EU) N° XXX/XXXX of the European Parliament and Council [proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and Council on the administrative cooperation through the Internal Market Information System ('the IMI Regulation') COM(2011) 522]. Cluster 10: Definitions and scope

CEMR position: Need to clearly define the scope of the Directive and clarify the exclusion of relations between public authorities

In the current financial climate, cost savings through the sharing of back office or front-line functions is increasingly common practice across contracting authorities. Sharing services between public sector bodies is a way to organise services efficiently and innovatively in the interest of the public. It is about internal administrative organisation and not about avoiding competition.

CEMR therefore considers the provisions in the Commission’s proposal useful, however, proposes some amendments to better adjust them to the CJEU jurisprudence and current practice.

Therefore, we propose the following:

- Support amendments 2, 23 and 29 of the rapporteur
- Additional amendments on
  - article 1, subject-matter and scope
  - Article 4 (b)(c), services and supplies thresholds
  - article 10, specific exclusions for service contracts
  - article 11, relations between public authorities

Amendment to article 1, subject-matter and scope

| 1. This Directive establishes rules on the procedures for procurement by contracting authorities with respect to public contracts as well as design contests, whose value is estimated to be not less than the thresholds laid down in Article 4. | 1. | 2. Procurement within the meaning of this Directive is the purchase or other forms of acquisition of works, supplies or services by one or more contracting authorities from economic operators chosen by those contracting authorities, whether or not the works, supplies or services are intended for a public purpose. | 2. Procurement within the meaning of this Directive is the purchase or other forms of acquisition of works, supplies or services via public contracts by one or more contracting authorities from economic operators chosen by those contracting authorities, whether or not the works, supplies or services are intended for a public purpose. |
| An entirety of works, supplies and/or services, even if purchased through different contracts, constitutes a single procurement within the meaning of this Directive, if the contracts are part of one single project. | An entirety of works, supplies and/or services, even if purchased through different contracts, constitutes a single procurement within the meaning of this Directive, if the contracts are part of one single project. |

It is clear that procurement Directive applies only to ‘procurements’ including lease and hire activities. It does not apply to ‘other forms of acquisition’ such as borrowing a good for no charge.

According to the ruling of the Court of Justice of The European Union (Helmut Müller C-451/08), works, supplies or services that are not intended for a public purpose are not subject to procurement law. The Commission should not seek to expand the scope of the rules in this way.
The basis of the procurement definition should be a single contract and not a single project. One project may have many contracts some of which may fall within the scope of the Directive, some of which may not. Adding up values of services, supplies and works only because they are part of the same project is of no additional value and an obvious attempt made by the Commission to increase the number of contracts which fall under the scope of this Directive. For example, the architectural services and the legal advisory services in connection with a works contract are clearly separate from the services connected with the actual construction. Therefore this sentence has to be entirely deleted.

<td>(d) EUR 1 000 000 for public contracts for social and other specific services listed in Annex XVI.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

As outlined in our introduction (pages 3-5) the current thresholds do not represent a level at which cross-border provision becomes economically viable for bidders and suppliers. The Commission’s own figures show that only 1.6% of contracts are in practice awarded to a provider based in another Member State. The rules are therefore disproportionate to the results being achieved.

CEMR strongly advocates for an increased threshold in order to get the balance right in terms of reflecting cross-border interest: doubling the thresholds for goods and services to €400,000 would be a positive first step.

This Directive shall not apply to public service contracts for:

(c) arbitration and conciliation services;

(d) financial services in connection with the issue, sale, purchase or transfer of securities or other financial instruments within the meaning of Directive 2004/39/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council, central bank services and operations conducted with the European Financial Stability Facility;

This Directive shall also not apply to public service contracts for:

(c) arbitration and conciliation services;

(c a) any of the following legal services:

(i) legal representation of a client in judicial proceedings before courts, tribunals or public authorities by a lawyer within the meaning of Article 1 of Directive 77/249/EEC;

(ii) document certification services which must be provided by notaries;

(iii) legal services provided by trustees, appointed guardians or other legal services the providers of which are designated by a court or tribunal in the Member State concerned;

(iv) other legal services which in the Member State concerned are connected, even occasionally, with the exercise of official authority

(d) financial services in connection with the issue, sale, purchase or transfer of securities or other financial instruments within the meaning of Directive 2004/39/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council, in particular transactions by the contracting authorities to raise money or capital, central bank services and operations conducted with the European Financial Stability Facility;

Legal services are often national by nature and cannot be easily performed transnationally. In the case of litigation, it is often necessary to award legal services to a specialist in the relevant field who is particularly suitable for the particular case. To implement tendering procedures is not possible within the short time typically required for legal advice. Furthermore, the client is generally not able to describe the necessary services because he or she is not an expert and therefore cannot calculate the value of the award either. Last but not least, the award of legal services is generally subject to trust, and established relationships with existing legal advisers. These cannot be interpreted objectively or quantified. Therefore the purpose of this Directive does not go together with the award of legal services.

CEMR is concerned that under article 10 (d) activities to raise money or capital are no longer excluded from the Directive. This will have a major impact on the ability of local and regional authorities to borrow money because public procurement procedures will make public borrowing a much more lengthy, complicated and expensive process.

(a) the decision-making bodies of the controlled legal person are composed of representatives of all participating contracting authorities;

(b) those contracting authorities are able to jointly exert decisive influence over the strategic objectives and significant decisions of the controlled legal person;

(a) the agreement establishes a genuine cooperation between the participating contracting authorities aimed at carrying out jointly their public service tasks and involving mutual rights and obligations of the parties;

(b) the agreement is governed only by considerations relating to the public interest;

(c) the participating contracting authorities do not perform on the open market more than 10 % in terms of turnover of the activities which are relevant in the context of the agreement;

(d) the agreement does not involve financial transfers between the participating contracting authorities, where the following conditions are fulfilled:

(a) the contracting authorities exercise jointly over the legal person a control which is similar to that which they exercise over their own departments;

(b) the essential part of the activities of that legal person are carried out for the controlling contracting authorities or other legal persons controlled by the same contracting authorities;

(c) there is no active private participation in the controlled legal person.

For the purposes of point (a), contracting authorities shall be deemed to jointly control a legal person where the following cumulative conditions are fulfilled:

(a) at least one of the principal decision-making bodies of the controlled legal person is composed of representatives of all participating contracting authorities;

(b) those contracting authorities are able to jointly exert decisive influence over the strategic objectives and significant decisions of the controlled legal person;

(d) the controlled legal person does not draw any gains other than the reimbursement of actual costs from the public contracts with the contracting authorities.

4. An agreement concluded between two or more contracting authorities shall not be deemed to be a public contract within the meaning of Article 2(7) of this Directive, and thus fall outside the scope of the Directive where the following cumulative conditions are fulfilled:

(a) the purpose of the partnership is the provision of a public-service task conferred on all the public authorities or the provision of an ancillary task necessary to deliver the public service task conferred on all the public authorities;

(b) the task is carried out solely by the public authorities concerned i.e. without the involvement of active private capital.
authorities, other than those corresponding to the reimbursement of actual costs of the works, services or supplies:

(e) there is no private participation in any of the contracting authorities involved.

5. The absence of private participation referred to in paragraphs 1 to 4 shall be verified at the time of the award of the contract or of the conclusion of the agreement.

The exclusions provided for in paragraphs 1 to 4 shall cease to apply from the moment any private participation takes place, with the effect that ongoing contracts need to be opened to competition through regular procurement procedures.

5. The absence of private participation referred to in paragraphs 3 to 6 shall be verified at the time of the award of the contract or of the conclusion of the agreement.

The exclusions provided for in paragraphs 1 to 4 shall cease to apply from the moment any private participation takes place, with the effect that ongoing contracts need to be opened to competition through regular procurement procedures.

Justification

In the current financial climate, cost savings through the sharing of back office or front-line functions is increasingly common practice across contracting authorities. Sharing services between public sector bodies is a way to organise services efficiently and innovatively in the interest of the public. It is about internal administrative organisation and not about avoiding competition.

11.1.b), 11.3.b) The CJEU jurisprudence (Teckal Case C-107/98) refers to the 'essential part' of an authorities' activities, not 90% of an authorities' activities. Restricting Teckal case law further should be avoided.

11.1.c), 11.3.c), 11.4.b): The reference should be only to an 'operational' or 'active' capital holding in the controlled legal person. This is to allow 'non-operational' or 'sleeping' capital to be invested into the controlled legal person without breaking the 'in-house' or 'public-public' link. This would help public authorities to share services with each other and save taxpayers' money.

11.4 a) The 'provision public service task conferred on all the public authorities' refers to the ECJ jurisprudence in the case C-480/06 Stadtreinigung Hamburg. Also ancillary tasks, such as cleaning or IT services provided by another contracting authority, as well as internal services which the public authorities have to use in order to deliver their public tasks and to ensure the functioning of their administrative structures have to be covered by the exemption. These tasks are by nature of public character.

11.5 deletions: To achieve the stated aim of legislative simplification, excessive explanations should be avoided in a legal text and instead placed into separate guidance, a handbook, or interpretative communications from the Commission.

The Council of European Municipalities and Regions (CEMR) is the broadest organisation of local and regional authorities in Europe. Its members are over 50 national associations of municipalities and regions from 40 European countries. Together these associations represent some 100 000 local and regional authorities.

CEMR’s objectives are twofold: to influence European legislation on behalf of local and regional authorities and to provide a platform for exchange between its members associations and their elected officials and experts.

Moreover, CEMR is the European section of United Cities and Local Governments (UCLG), the worldwide organisation of local government.
